A Guide for End-of-Life Planning

Overview of Items for Consideration

The purpose of this booklet is to assist you in expressing your wishes regarding what happens at the time of your death. It is intended to assist the grieving and provide them valuable information about the wishes of the deceased.

Death is a difficult subject to discuss; however, we do our best to prepare for death with the assurance and peace-of-mind brought to us by advance preparation of our legal documents. We do not know how our death will occur — suddenly in an accident, through illness or as a natural result of aging. Regardless of how it comes, this booklet will bring comfort in knowing that you are conveying helpful information about yourself to your family, pastors and friends.

The funeral or memorial service recognizes both sorrow and hope as loved ones remember the life of a family member or friend. But for the service to do that, pastors and survivors must know your wishes. One of the most caring legacies you can give those closest to you is a specific set of instructions that will enable them to know your preferences. At first glance, this seems an unwelcome assignment, yet once tackled it is enormously satisfying to pull together all the essential details of your life in a form that will ensure that those who bear the responsibility of making arrangements do so with the knowledge that they are doing as you would have wished. It is wise to take on the assignment now, whatever your age, and to review and update the information annually.

This information should be readily accessible in your home, and it is advisable to inform your family members of its existence.

Funeral or Memorial Service: There are important decisions to be made. The first decision to be made: a funeral or a memorial service? A funeral traditionally takes place within days of a death and includes the closed casket. A viewing, if desired, should be done at the funeral home prior to the service. A memorial service generally follows burial or cremation and can be held at a time when your widely dispersed families and friends can come together. Your pastors, if any, are prepared to help in the decisions and arrangements that need to be made.

If you desire a church funeral, there are some points of interest of which to be aware. Most churches do not charge a fee for a funeral service; however, some people choose to make a contribution to the church. It is also customary for a financial honorarium to be given to the musicians or choir if they participate in the service.

A reception may be arranged at the church following the service.

Funeral Homes: Funeral homes, sometimes called mortuaries, provide important services at a critical time. They are very willing to assist with preplanning (or arranging a prepaid funeral if that is requested) and must by law provide the price of each service they offer. They make arrangements for cremations or burials and for embalming, if necessary. They secure the death certificates along with the many copies the personal representative, also called executor, will need. They will handle the obituary for the newspapers. Funeral homes have facilities for visitation prior to the funeral and a chapel for the funeral or memorial service if this is preferred to a church. They can arrange transportation to the cemetery. When arrangements are thought through calmly in advance, needless expense may be avoided.

Cremation: Cremated remains may be interred in a cemetery or scattered at a cherished site. The service is held in the church either before or after the burial of the ashes.

Burial: It is important to decide on a burial site in advance. Even though some rural or church cemeteries do not charge for a plot, spaces must be reserved. Most cemetery plots must be purchased, and it is very difficult for a family in mourning to make that decision. Cemeteries require full payment to be made before burial. The graveside service is usually attended by family and close friends and includes appropriate scripture and liturgy by the pastor.
Memorial Gift vs. Flowers: Many grieving families today prefer a donation of enduring remembrance in lieu of flowers. Contributions to your favorite charities, professional organizations, and educational institutions are all possibilities.

Hospice: Hospice provides quality palliative care to those facing life-limiting illness and end-of-life issues. These services are available to the patient, their family and the community. Care can take place in the home, in nursing homes, or in the hospital. The hospice team includes the patient's personal physician, Hospice physician, nurses, home health aides, social workers, clergy, trained volunteers and specialized therapists, if needed. Hospice care is covered under Medicare, Medicaid, most private insurance plans, HMOs and other managed care organizations.

Veteran's Benefits: All honorably discharged veterans and their spouses are entitled to burial in a National Cemetery. Benefits include a gravesite in any of the 120 National Cemeteries (with available space), opening and closing of the grave, perpetual care, a Government headstone, a burial flag and a Presidential Certificate at no cost to the family. Cremated remains are buried in national cemeteries in a timely manner with the same honors as casketed remains.

A funeral honors ceremony can also be provided at the church service or graveside, whichever the family specifies. The core elements include the flag folding, flag presentation and the playing of “Taps”.

Organ and Tissue Donations: If you have a desire to be an organ or tissue donor, it is extremely important that you let your family know and make arrangements now. Organ donation is truly a unique opportunity to save lives, as it is possible for a single donor to donate organs and tissues that may help as many as 60 recipients. It is now possible to transplant 25 different organs and tissues, including corneas, heart, heart valves, liver, kidneys, bone and cartilage, skin, lungs and more. You may fill out a donor card and carry it with you in your wallet or even designate on a driver's license your wishes to be a donor. Please see Uniform Donor Card.

Donating Your Body to Science: The Anatomical Board is the organization in Florida to which persons may donate their bodies. The Anatomical Board has two offices. The main office is located at the University of Florida, College of Medicine, in the Health Science Center. The branch office is located at the University of Miami, School of Medicine.

Special Personal Property Disposition – My “Special” Possessions

Everyone has special possessions that they wish to go to specific people. Please utilize the last page of your Last Will and Testament to designate where these items should go. Please use this page to provide additional instructions. Look around your home and specify who (family, friend, institution) should receive the items that are important to you. This list can help avoid any misunderstandings and preserve family harmony, but remember it is not legally binding. It is only a statement of your wishes. If you have items that are especially valuable, they can be included in your will as “A Separate Writing.” This Separate Writing may be updated from time to time without visiting your attorney to update your will. Some items you may want to consider are: the family china, silver service, favorite painting(s) or artwork, photo albums, jewelry, quilts, medals, musical instruments, etc.

Special Property Disposition – Collections and Libraries
Some people have collections that are of special interest to them, but not to their heirs. The heirs may not know the best way to liquidate these collections for maximum benefit to the estate. Please list what collections you have and what you want done with those collections if the family does not want them. You may want to donate them to a college, university, or other individual. If you wish them to be sold, who would you trust to handle the sale? Is there some periodical that could serve as a pricing guide? Are there any dealers or consignment shops that deal specifically in that item?

Commonly Asked Questions

1. Can my body be donated if I have a serious disease at the time of my death or die from a crushing injury? No, the Anatomical Board cannot accept bodies of persons dying from crushing injuries, sepsis, or highly communicable diseases (such as hepatitis or AIDS).

2. How long would my remains be used for medical education and research purposes? Medical education and research procedures take up to two years to be completed. If a request has been made for the return of the cremains, we will contact the family at the time that the ashes are available.

3. What happens to my body after the medical studies are complete? Upon completion of medical studies, the bodies are cremated pursuant to Florida Statutes 497.005 and one of two options followed.
   (1) The ashes can be returned to the family or location selected by the family for final interment. The Anatomical Board will pay for shipping the ashes, but the cost of interment is the responsibility of the survivors.
   (2) If no request has been made for the return of the cremains to the survivors, the Anatomical Board takes responsibility for spreading the cremains over the waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

4. How old do I have to be to donate my body? Enrollment is open to anyone 18 years of age or older.

5. Can I donate someone else's body, for example, that of my wife or husband? This cannot be done while the donor is living unless you hold power-of-attorney. Documentation to this effect will be required. Otherwise, after the individual dies, the nearest living next-of-kin can donate the body by consent.

6. If I move from the State of Florida, what happens to my donation? Notify the Anatomical Board that you wish to withdraw your donation. We will then assist you, if you desire, in contacting a medical school in your new area of residence or you request our list of body donation programs.

7. What happens if I die outside of the State of Florida? If death occurs outside the State of Florida, there are two options.
   (1) The Anatomical Board will assist the donor's family in making arrangements to have the remains donated to the nearest medical school or the family may check our list of body donor programs for information on the closest medical school.
   (2) If the next-of-kin insists that the body be returned to the Anatomical Board, the survivors must assume responsibility for the embalming and transportation costs. A funeral director in the area where the donor expired should be contacted. The funeral director can then contact the Anatomical Board for specific embalming instructions.

8. Will there be any expense to my family or estate for donating my body to the Anatomical Board? The expense which must be paid by the next-of-kin or estate of the deceased are all funeral home expenses which include:
   (1) The preliminary embalming
   (2) Transportation to the University of Florida or the University of Miami School of Medicine.
   (3) Charges for these services are determined by individual funeral homes, crematories or mortuaries. You may wish to discuss arrangements with more than one funeral director. The Anatomical Board will assume costs for storage, cremation, and final disposition of the cremains.

9. Am I required to use a specific funeral home to make arrangements for the transportation and handling of my body? At the time of death, the remains must be taken to a funeral home of the family's choice. The funeral director should be told of the wishes of the deceased to have his or her body made available for use in medical education. The funeral director should be told to notify the Anatomical Board prior to transporting the body to Gainesville or Miami.
